THE RECTOR AND VISITORS OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA

March 1, 2019

Full Board Open and Closed Session, Thursday, February 28, 2019

Following a day of committee meetings, the Board of Visitors met in open and closed session at 5:20 p.m. on Thursday, February 28 to consider candidates for student and faculty representative to the Board for the 2019-2020 academic year. Frank M. Conner III, Rector, opened the meeting and asked for a motion to resume in closed session.

After adopting the following motion made by Mr. Bowles and duly seconded, the voting members present plus Brendan T. Nigro, Margaret F. Riley, Susan G. Harris, W. Thomas Leback, and Timothy J. Heaphy went into closed session at 5:25 p.m.:

I move that the Board of Visitors go into closed session for the purpose of discussing prospective candidates for appointment; specifically, to discuss candidates for the position of student representative and faculty representative to the Board of Visitors, in accordance with section 2.2-3711 (A) (1) of the Code of Virginia.

At 5:35 p.m., the Board left closed session and, on the following motion made by Mr. Bowles, all members present certified by roll call vote that the deliberations in closed session had been conducted in accordance with the exemptions permitted by the Virginia Freedom of Information Act. I move that we vote on and record our certification that, to the best of each member's knowledge, only public business matters lawfully exempted from open meeting requirements and which were identified in the motion authorizing the closed session, were heard, discussed, or considered in closed session.

On motion by the Rector that was duly seconded, the Board voted unanimously to appoint Derrick Wang, a third-year student majoring in economics (public policy) and mathematics in the College and Graduate School of Arts & Sciences, as the student representative to the Board of Visitors for the 2019-2020 academic year, and Mr. Peter Brunjes, Commonwealth Professor of Psychology in the College and Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and Chair of the Faculty Senate, as the faculty representative to the Board of Visitors for the 2019-2020 academic year.

Full Board Meeting Friday, March 1, 2019

Minutes of the December 7, 2018 Meeting of the Board of Visitors

On motion, the Minutes of the December 7, 2018 meeting were approved unanimously.

APPROVAL OF THE MINUTES OF THE DECEMBER 7, 2018 MEETING OF THE BOARD OF VISITORS

RESOLVED, the Board of Visitors approves the minutes of the December 7, 2018 meeting of the Board of Visitors.

Consent Agenda

Upon motion, the Board approved consideration of addenda to the published meeting agenda.

RESOLUTION TO APPROVE ADDITIONAL AGENDA ITEMS

RESOLVED, the Board of Visitors approves the consideration of addenda to the published Agenda.

Discussion with University Leadership

President Ryan provided some updates to the Board on the following items:

Student Health Center

The University received a very sizeable anonymous gift for the Student Health Center, but there is more to do. The University will be moving forward with this project and the Center should be fully operational by the fall semester 2021.

School of Data Science

The Faculty Senate is considering the proposal for a new school of Data Science. They have an advisory role to the Board, which is important. It is a two-phase process: in phase one, they determine whether or not it is a good idea conceptually; that phase has been completed. In phase two they consider the detailed proposal for the school. There have been a number of very good questions raised by members of the Faculty Senate and Director Bourne has answered them. Following review by the Faculty Senate, the Board must approve, then the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia (SCHEV) will provide the final approval.

Emmet/Ivy Working Group Report

This working group was chaired by Beth Meyer from the School of Architecture. The charge of the group was to think about the Emmet/Ivy parcel as a whole, the uses of this space, and what to put there. Their recommendations include three major "nexuses": creativity and arts, discovery, and democracy. The idea is to have anchor buildings and programs for each nexus. For the creativity and experimental arts, the anchor building would be some type of performing arts center. For discovery, one idea would be the School of Data Science and/or a multi-purpose research building which would be open to teams of faculty or students who would collaborate for a temporary period (such as the duration of a grant). For democracy, the anchor could be the Batten School. The recommendations from this working group will be vetted throughout the leadership of the University. President Ryan said a hotel and conference center will be built over the next several years; the performing arts center will depend on philanthropy, as will a new location for the Batten School. If the School of Data Science is located on the site, it will be the next building. One of the most important things to ensure this site is used is to make it easy to get there by foot. He said he would guess off the top of his head that it should be partially built out within 10 years.

Community Working Group

The major issues the Community Working Group identified in their report were not surprising: jobs and wages, affordable housing, access to healthcare, and a focus on educational opportunities from pre-K to higher education. The working group was comprised of people that did not know each other, and there was a sense of trepidation when they first began, but they worked really well together provided a good set of recommendations. President Ryan said in some respects it was a microcosm of what he would like to see between the University and the Charlottesville community – coming together for a common purpose and developing a sense of trust.

Position Searches

Finalists are being interviewed for the Dean of the Batten School. The Vice President for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion is in the first round of interviews and the finalists will be visiting soon. The search for the School of Nursing did not identify a top candidate and so next steps may include a possible interim dean.

Strategic Planning

Administrators are analyzing a set of specific ideas to be able to make some hard decisions about what can and cannot be done, and proper sequencing. President Ryan met with the deans to discuss big ideas related to research and faculty hiring. He will deliver a draft report to the Board by the June meeting.

Campaign Planning / Travel / Ours to Shape

Last semester, President Ryan visited Richmond, Houston, New Orleans, New York, and Dallas. This semester he has been to Washington D.C., Norfolk, and Atlanta. The hope is that by the time of the official launch of the capital campaign in October, close to 50% of the overall goal will have been raised.

Relationship with University-Associated Organizations

President Sullivan initiated a study of university-related foundations and their relationships to the University. A working group produced a report that John Jeffries, Senior Vice President for Advancement, was involved in preparing as well as others in the University and with the foundations. Mr. Jeffries then presented the report to the Board. Upon motion, the following resolution was approved by unanimous voice vote.

ADOPTION OF POLICY ON UNIVERSITY-ASSOCIATED ORGANIZATIONS (FORMERLY KNOWN AS UNIVERSITY-RELATED FOUNDATIONS)

WHEREAS, the University recognizes the value and contributions of independent University-Associated Organizations (“UAOs”), formerly known as University-Related Foundations; and

WHEREAS, the University recognizes the importance of, and is committed to, building strong relationships with its partners and stakeholders, including UAOs; and

WHEREAS, the University wishes to establish requirements to strengthen collaboration, recognize UAOs’ independence, and achieve strategic alignment;

RESOLVED, the Board of Visitors shall have the authority to confer or withdraw recognition of a UAO; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, the University President shall have administrative authority for University-UAO relations, including the authority to enter negotiations with an organization seeking UAO status; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, the University and each UAO will enter into a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) detailing expectations and responsibilities for the University and for the UAO; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, the University President may delegate authority for UAO relations to a designated representative; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, two University representatives, one designated by the Board of Visitors and one designated by the President, shall serve as full voting members of each UAO's governing board; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, business transactions between the University and a UAO shall be arm's-length and documented as appropriate; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, the Board of Visitors shall confer recognition of existing University-Related Foundations as University-Associated Organizations contingent upon the successful execution of a UAO-MOU; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, current compliance requirements for University-Related Foundations will remain in place through the end of the current reporting period. Future compliance for University Associated Organizations will be reported in accordance with the UAO-MOUs; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, the Board of Visitors approves the new policy, Relationship with University-Associated Organizations; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, once approved by the Board, the new policy, Relationship with University Associated-Organizations shall supersede: (a) the 1992 Policy on University-Related Foundations, (b) the 2000 BOV Plan for Working with University-Related Foundations, (c) the 2007 Special Committee on Foundation Final Report, and (d) the 2008 standard MOU between foundations and the University.

Strategic Investment Fund (SIF)

In December, the Board approved the principle that the SIF would be used to finance the strategic plan, which will be presented in June, and that, in the interim, the SIF could be used for three purposes: (1) additional bicentennial professorships; (2) research and research infrastructure; and (3) truly strategic opportunities that leverage other outside investments.

A memo was provided to the Board on this point prior to the meeting, which follows up on the second category: the use of funds for research and research infrastructure. As anticipated in the discussion in December, the proposal provides a streamlined process for allocating these funds in the interim period. The funding proposals will continue to be solicited from academic leaders, but the administration will also respond to time-sensitive strategic opportunities in the areas of research and research infrastructure, and judge them by the rigorous and difficult-to-satisfy criteria that is in place. The process, while streamlined, adheres to the critical principle that SIF monies will not be used for ongoing operational expenses; such funds may be used only for truly strategic investments.

A resolution was given to the Board to approve no more than $30 million to be spent in this interim period in accordance with what is laid out in the memo. At the June meeting, in conjunction with the presentation of the strategic plan, the leadership will provide a review of SIF investments to date, the impact on the university, and a new set of guidelines.

Upon motion, the following resolution was approved by unanimous voice vote.

INTERIM USE OF STRATEGIC INVESTMENT FUNDS FOR RESEARCH AND RESEARCH INFRASTRUCTURE

RESOLVED, the Board of Visitors approves allocating up to $30 million out of the earnings of the Strategic Investment Fund to continue investing in Research and Research Infrastructure and to maintain the momentum in research growth and intensity during the interim period until the strategic plan and its funding is presented and approved.

UVA in Context

President Ryan said he has been working on a vision for the University as part of the strategic planning process. It is still a work in progress; he had shared a draft with the Board prior to the meeting. He said he also hoped everyone received their copy of “Our Higher Calling” by Thorp and Goldstein. He thought it was a great distillation of the state of American higher education and where it is going. The book drives home two important points that have informed his thinking: (1) the importance of context in higher education-- in some ways, all institutions are facing the same challenges, but not all institutions are created equal-- and so it is important to know what to pay attention to; and (2) how universities measure success today and how they should measure it in the future.

President Ryan spent time talking about the future, but thinks it’s important to establish some general context. He said on one hand, higher education in America is working: we’ve got most of the top universities in the world, college graduates have twice the lifetime earnings of non-graduates, and major research universities are a major driver of economic growth. It is also clear some people are losing faith in higher education. Some people believe colleges and universities are actively harming this country, and most business leaders don’t believe graduates have the skills that companies are looking for. Those trends apply to every college and university in America. As we think about how to address them, we need to recognize that not all colleges and universities are the same.

UVA is one of more than 3,000 four-year institutions in the U.S., but only about 2,000 have full-time undergraduates, only 800 offer up to a doctorate, and less than 25 have a AAA bond rating and an endowment of more than $5 billion. If you drill down even further, you can see even more ways that UVA stands out relative to most schools. We have a lower acceptance rate, a higher graduation rate, our students graduate with less debt than the average, and default at a much lower rate. We're also much better at helping our students succeed -- across race and ethnicity. That context is important as we look at what different schools are doing: enrolling more students; acquiring outside companies; offering better amenities; focusing on emerging trends in technology; making themselves more accessible and affordable; and some are even closing down.

President Ryan said context helps because what makes sense for one school might not make sense for another. For example, he does not think we should look at the schools that are focused on growing as fast as possible or investing hundreds of millions of dollars to make their campuses look like resorts. That is not who we are. He does think we should pay attention to schools that are similar to us and see how they are responding to major trends and pressures in higher education. We should ask ourselves the big question: do we want to chase our peers or identify for ourselves the metrics that we think matter? His belief is that universities will be, and should be, judged quite differently than they are now. With the growing skepticism of higher education, combined with the explosion of data that give insight into what happens on campus and after our students graduate, colleges and universities will be—and should be—assessed by criteria that better capture the true value of an institution to students and the public. UVA has an obligation to lead the way. That is the main idea behind the vision statement. He also included some questions to guide the discussion:

- In context, does this draft vision resonate? Is it inspiring? What's missing?
- How should we measure success? How are the metrics of the future different from the ones we use to measure ourselves today?
- Trying to balance our current obligations with our forward-looking goals will necessarily create tension. How do we manage that shift?

After much discussion centered around the readings and the future of the University, the Board recessed from 11:45 to 1:00 p.m. for lunch. The meeting resumed at 1:15 p.m.

At 1:15 p.m., the full Board meeting resumed with the Rector presiding.

Health System Board Report

A brief report on the Health System Board meeting was provided by the chair, Dr. L.D. Britt. This report can be found at:

Remarks by the Chancellor

Chancellor Donna Henry mentioned that the day was “Admitted Student” day at Wise. It is an opportunity for those students who have been admitted to see what Wise is all about. They were expecting about 60 families and 90 attended, which is good news.

Chancellor Henry gave a report on the collaborative efforts between The University of Virginia and The University of Virginia’s College at Wise. Some of the efforts noted were:

Appalachian Prosperity Project – UVA Contact is: Pace Lochte

The Appalachian Prosperity Project (APP) is a collaborative partnership among the University of Virginia, UVA's College at Wise, the Coalfield region, the private sector, and the state to advance education, health, and economic prosperity in Southwest Virginia. The APP is a university-community-industry partnership that uses a systems approach to integrate education, health, and business development. Each component of this system is important in attracting new employers to this emerging region, maintaining the competitiveness of existing companies, and creating new ventures.

Virginia College Advising Corps

Students in the advising corps are typically recent alumni who go out into the high schools and help students understand the process of applying to colleges. Wise currently has five corps members, some in southwest Virginia and some in northern Virginia. Chancellor Henry is hoping to get their name out to more potential students through this program.

Appalachian Ventures

Appalachian Ventures encompasses initiatives to foster a robust economy. Chancellor Henry said they are working with the Clinch River Valley Initiative in the Clinch Valley watershed, which is a very biodiverse area. Faculty in environmental sciences do research there.

My Southwest Virginia Opportunity

Another component of the APP project. This is UVA’s College at Wise’s outreach to the small towns in southwest Virginia. The College is able to hand out small grants ($3-5K) per town to develop young leaders and to help them think about ways to improve their towns and the economy.

UVA Advancement

Chancellor Henry said this is one of their most seamless of collaborations with UVA Wise; they are directly linked to UVA-Wise Development. The endowment funds for the College are invested by UVIMCO, and Wise donors are managed in the UVA Database. Mark Luellen is present at most of the events. She said the FY19 giving just passed the $5M dollar mark at $5,097,034. The FY19 cash flow is $6,677,543, up 4% over last year. The College at Wise campaign fundraising to date is $47,575,367.

Chancellor Henry said of special note is they have established 35 Bicentennial Scholarship Funds totaling $7.4 million with additional matches from the Bicentennial Fund of $6.2 million. The College at Wise will recognize the donors of 21 new endowed scholarship fund and one new endowed awards fund at the annual Scholarship Luncheon on March 30, 2019.

Security

Campus Police has been leading the discussions within the College and with University staff on the development and implementation the new campus security system. The University's Associate Vice President for Safety and the University Chief of Police were in Wise to discuss the implementation of the system and ways the College and University could coordinate more.

Office of Sponsored Programs

Grant proposal development: Bruce Cahoon (Department of Natural Sciences) will be submitting a NSF Major Research Instrumentation grant request to the National Science Foundation (NSF) for $82,827. If funded, the monies will enable UVA-Wise to purchase a JXN-30 centrifuge from Beckman-Coulter. This is a high-speed centrifuge that will replace the current 31 years old centrifuge that is no longer supported by the manufacturer. It will be utilized by both students and faculty for research.

Mike Shell (Department of Natural Sciences) will be submitting a R15 AREA (Academic Research Enhancement Award) grant request to the National Institutes of Health (NIH) for $300,000 covering three years. This program supports small scale research projects (that have not been major recipients of NIH support) with the purpose of exposing UVA-Wise students to research and strengthening the research environment of UVA-Wise.

Program Agreement with the Appalachian College of Pharmacy (ACP)

UVA-Wise and the ACP signed a dual degree program agreement on Monday, January 21, 2019. This agreement will allow qualified students to earn simultaneously a bachelor's degree in natural sciences at UVA-Wise while earning a doctor of pharmacy degree at ACP in a total of six years. The program will begin with the 2019-2020 academic year.

Office of Diversity

The Provost provided a bridging grant focused on diversity in Wise. UVA-Wise students and staff participated in MLK events on Grounds. UVA-Wise alumnus Joy Mitchell works in office and supported this visit.

Library - Dean Unsworth is sharing digital resources with UVA-Wise.

Technology - Ron Hutchins

The software engineering and computer science programs at Wise have been scrutinized to make sure they have the appropriate technology to support these programs. Ron Hutchins has supported them with new technology.

General Counsel

Tim Heaphy visited Wise in the fall of 2018. Barry Meek is the go-to person for Wise staff – he also visits several times per year and does all of the training for honor students.

Government Relations

Betsey Daley works closely with the local legislators so she knows how to help Wise as well.

Architects Office

The University Office of the Architect helps Wise with their master planning and construction projects.

Continuing Education

Dean Alex Hernandez visited to discuss collaboration

Global studies

Stephen Mull plans to visit UVA-Wise on March 22 to seek out ways to collaborate.

Audit Reviews

Carolyn Saint, Chief Audit Executive, helps with audits at UVA-Wise and provides them with good sound advice.

These are just a few of the ways in which the University is currently collaborating with UVA-Wise. Chancellor Henry expressed her gratitude for these opportunities.

Remarks by the Student Member

Mr. Nigro said he believes the single-most discussed topic amongst students is diversity and equity, a topic for which the Board has already given quite a bit of thought.

Year over year, the University is admitting its most diverse classes in the University's history. As the student body continues to look more and more diverse, it is the University's responsibility to make sure we are providing adequate support for the particular experiences of our students of various backgrounds once they matriculate.

Mr. Nigro said he thought it would be helpful to look first at this from a data-driven perspective on how students perceive the campus climate on diversity and inclusion. Based on the 2018 SERU (Student Experience in the Research University) data, which is admittedly likely skewed by the actions of August 11, 2017, the survey indicates some key opportunities for growth. It found that about 17% of University students perceive the University climate to be one that is somewhat or very not appreciative of diversity, and 25% of our students feel at least somewhat uncomfortable with the culture of diversity and inclusion on Grounds. By students' fourth year in their undergraduate studies, only 39% of our students report that they have not either personally experienced or witnessed harassment or discrimination along lines of race and ethnicity.

He said a bigger challenge than the perception of diversity is the general deficit of 'bridge-building' across difference which currently exists within the student body. A staggering 35% of students said that they either never, rarely, or only occasionally, "gained a deeper understanding of other perspectives of students of a different race or ethnicity." As the University embarks on developing a strategic plan, he encouraged the Board not to limit conversations of diversity to admission and yield, but to create an academic and community climate that encourages difficult conversations, spurs growth from our students, and embraces students of varied backgrounds.

Mr. Nigro said to improve our culture of diversity and inclusion we should focus on two chief areas: (1) the addition of multicultural spaces; and (2) continued energy on faculty diversity and diverse course offerings.

Multicultural spaces: as the University's student body has become increasingly diverse over the last 50 years, spaces for students of color to gather, learn, and celebrate have not kept pace. In 2016, the University opened the Multicultural Student Center in the basement of Newcomb Hall, but the fire capacity for that space is just 49 students. Likewise, the Office of African-American Affairs holds only about 35 students. These are the two main spaces devoted to students of color (of which there are about 5,500). There are spaces that, while striving to be more inclusive, remain spaces where students of color do not always feel comfortable, including the Greek system and the Corner. Mr. Nigro believes the Board and President are positioned to meet this opportunity to provide more spaces for multicultural students over the next five years. As the Emmet-Ivy corridor's plans are solidified, there are opportunities to employ and re-envision collaborative spaces there and on Central Grounds to be hubs of bridge building and student support.

Another important area of opportunity for the University is hiring and promoting talented and diverse faculty and administrators. He said it has been an incredible joy working with the new leadership of the University and as we move forward we need to make sure that team is diverse.

On faculty, under Provost Katsouleas' leadership, Mr. Nigro believes we have made tremendous strides, entering from the lowest quartile of the AAU institutions to the interquartile range. There is still plenty of work still to be done. For example, less than 3% of academic faculty identify as Hispanic/Latinx and less than 4% of identify as African-American, combining to around 6.5%. More than 16% of the student body is Hispanic/Latinx or African-American, and growing. As the Board continues to talk about the importance of mentorship and support from faculty, it is crucial to note that often the launching point for such mentorship can be when students finally see a professor who looks like them. The more students to whom we can give that experience, the better off our student outcomes will be.

He also encouraged the Board to consider how professorship support through Bicentennial Professorships and other programs, along with general hiring practices, inform the people we bring in. If it is true that cluster hires yield more diverse results in hiring, maybe we ought to further support that initiative financially and strategically.

Additionally, the courses need to engage with elements of difference and make sure our students of color feel that they can be grounded in their cultural identity in academic pursuits if they so choose. Mr. Nigro said it will serve us well to think about UVA's academic context as a critical component of preparing our students to lead in a diverse world.

Mr. Nigro said he does not want to detract from the tremendous work the Board and leadership have done in making the University a more diverse and inclusive space, but to point out that there is still room to grow. While graduation rates for Pell-grant recipients, Hispanic/Latinx students, Asian-American and African-American students far exceed national averages, it's incumbent on us in this moment to push that even further and be a national leader in embracing students of various backgrounds.

Mr. Nigro ended by welcoming Derrick Wang as the next student Board member and spoke briefly about his abilities. He also thanked the Board for their support over the last year.

Remarks by the Chair of the Faculty Senate

In Mr. Brunjes' absence, Ms. Riley read the following remarks:

I am sorry to not be able to make it to the meeting. I have some pretty awful flu and its better I don't expose you to it. Mimi Riley informed me that I have been appointed to be the Faculty Representative for next year. I'm honored, excited, and look forward to working with you!

The last time I spoke to you I tried to describe your very best faculty. If you remember, I pointed out that most of them were more or less obsessed with some particular topic and were willing to forgo large salaries in order to get a chance to think about and discuss that topic. They are attracted to University life for the freedom to immerse themselves in a world of discovering new knowledge and disseminating it to future generations. This culture is described fairly well in the book, Our Higher Calling. I believe President Ryan made this book available to you. The book describes the concept of “shared governance” as being essential to University operation, and points out that this feature dates all the way back to the formation of the University of Bologna in 1098. In UVA’s early days, committees of faculty made most of the decisions, including hiring and retaining faculty, curriculum and degrees, student discipline and athletics. The arrival of professional college administrators (e.g., President Alderman in 1905) changed the landscape of our College Administration (and indeed resulted in the formation of the UVA Faculty Senate). Nevertheless, ever since our founding, the faculty have retained the primary voices in issues of an academic nature.

We are seeing this process in the discussions of the new School of Data Sciences. The University has been presented with the opportunity of going full scale into one of the most important topics of the day: how to acquire and understand the increasingly large data sets. As someone who studies the brain, I certainly see it as important, as everything about the nervous system revolves around big numbers and complexity. The Senate is taking a dual approach to the new School. First, it analyzed and, notably, approved a “Phase 1” document, a high-level view of the concept and importance of the school and how it fits into the curriculum and society. We have now begun to examine the “Phase II” document, which, of course, contains the details of the school’s organization and function. Devils are often in details such as these. The new school has several novel features which, from the outside, appear very attractive. For example, it proposes that its faculty will be embedded in other schools and units around grounds. Such outreach is noteworthy, but the idea needs fleshing out. For all of the reasons outlined in the Thorp and Goldstein book, these faculty members will need to be able to come up for tenure evaluation. How will their committees be established? Will they contain non-School of Data Sciences representatives? Who will get to vote? When a faculty member gets a grant, will it be assigned solely to Data Sciences? How does the new school fit into the new Financial Model? Other units around Grounds are already involved in teaching classes related to Data Sciences (e.g., the Statistics, Math and Computer Sciences departments). If students chose to take statistics courses in the new School, how will this affect their accounting? These are indeed the “weeds”. They may seem unimportant, but they are actually crucial for the life of the new school. It is important to figure out just how things should operate beforehand rather than solving problems piecemeal as they arise. I have not yet heard of a problem that can’t be solved, but agree that it is worthwhile to get the new School off on the right foot. This is exactly what shared governance is designed to do: allow all to have a voice in the formation of academic programs at the outset with the assurance that a broad and thoughtful approach will end with much stronger programs. It is worth taking the time to ensure the School of Data Sciences will have what it takes to succeed.
